

Speak to Me!

Even if your cat doesn't know the words, the meaning is clear. Your tone of voice and body language convey much to your pet.

Eve Adamson

Posted: Tue Feb 1 00:00:00 PST 2005

So the next time you aren't sure whether you should verbally express yourself in the presence of your cat, speak up! "I'm constantly encouraging my clients to talk to their cats more," Gamble says. "Use your voice to deliver affection. It's like a vocal stroking, and that means a lot to your cat." Use your voice for training, bonding and basic interspecies communication. Your cat is listening.

- More Behavior Tips -

Page 1 | 2 | 3