

Microchip Your Cat

The simple procedure could save your cat's life.

By Steve Dale

One evening Routoucou, an indoor/outdoor cat that always came home after spending time outside, never returned. "Of course, I was devastated," says Francine Daigneault of Union, N.J. She spent weeks searching around her neighborhood, posting lost cat signs and making phone calls.

Out of the blue, a little more than two months later, Daigneault received a call from an emergency veterinary clinic in Staten Island. She heard four marvelous words: We have your cat.

Get the August 2008 issue of CAT FANCY to read the full article.