

Cat Makes Hotel a Home

Meet Matilda, the resident feline at New York City's historic Algonquin.

By Sandy Robins

One of the many perks of my job is that I travel and meet interesting people. The only downside is that I hate leaving my cats, Cali and Fudge; I need a feline fur fix on a daily basis.

You can imagine how thrilled I was on a recent trip to New York to discover that a Ragdoll named Matilda runs the Algonquin Hotel on West 44th Street, where I stayed in February.

Get the August 2009 issue of CAT FANCY to read the full article.*