

Breed Snapshot: Leopard in the Living Room

Owners go wild for their enchanting Bengals.

By Erika Sorocco

Your living room carpet gives way to desert sands; houseplants morph into a lush jungle; your sofa transforms into a riverbank; and there, sitting atop it, is a leopard with a piercing gaze. Only this leopard is smaller than your average wild feline. In fact, it's not much bigger than a housecat. This is no leopard; it's a Bengal, and this unique creature seems to change the most sterile environment into an exotic paradise.

Get the January 2009 issue of CAT FANCY to read the full article.