

Cross-Country Kitties

Reduce your stress during a long-distance move with cats.

By Justin W. Sanders

You've sold the house and bought another one thousands of miles away. You've found a new job, a new school for the kids and a new sports team to root for. Friends and family help you pack up your belongings, and you've stuffed everything you own into a U-Haul. You've been planning and executing this cross-country move for months and now, with the end in sight, you're exhausted.

Tired as you are, you haven't even begun to sweat. You still must move the cat.
