

It Ain't Easy Being a Young, Innovative Surfer

A little idea for a pet product earns big bucks.

By Laura Lee Bloor

Life is tough for 25-year-old Jonathan Warren. His job as a surf forecaster for Surflife.com allows him to set his own schedule so he can improve upon his surfing passion. He's competed and placed in several surf tournaments, and he also just happens to be a pet product creator whose first crack at an invention earned him national recognition and $40,000. Perhaps you've heard of it or bought one for your cat already: the PetSafe Micro I.D. Rescue Collar.
