

Home Life

How can you keep a house full of shedding cats clean?

By Sandy Robins

Spring brings new leaves on trees, the heady scent of flowers and, if you have cats, lots of shedding. Although cats that live a secluded, indoor existence shed continually because they are exposed to air conditioning and heating, there's no question about it: Come spring, they really get rid of their thick winter fur. Consequently, the idea of spring cleaning a house inhabited by shedding felines seems like an oxymoron.

Get the March 2009 issue of CAT FANCY to read the full article.