

Actress Runs to Save Pets' Lives

Model-actress Beth Ostrosky raises funds for animal shelter.

By Soraya Gutierrez

Posted: August 16, 2008 2 a.m. EDT

Beth OstroskyBeth Ostrosky, spokeswoman for the no-kill animal shelter North Shore Animal League America, recently formed Team Go Beth O! — a group of runners that she will lead at the ING New York City Marathon, Nov. 2.

Her team, made up of runners and supporters, aspires to raise funds to directly benefit the cats, kittens, dogs and puppies of the Animal League. The marathon is 26.2 miles, and the team has set a goal to raise $262,000 through sponsorships.

Her motivation, said the model-actress, comes from pets like Melody, a Calico cat with five healthy kittens that all were saved from being euthanized at an overcrowded shelter; and Corky, a 3-month-old Cocker Spaniel puppy, that was found abandoned in a dumpster.

All proceeds will benefit the Animal League's mission to find permanent homes for more than 20,000 orphaned animals each year. "I can't begin to express how rewarding it is to run for such a great cause," Ostrosky said.