

Pet Recovery Service Adds Twitter

Helpmefindmypet.com says it takes a proactive approach to locating, returning lost pets.

Posted: September 29, 2009, 3 a.m. EDT

Helpmefindmypet is now posting leads on lost, stolen and recovered pets on Twitter, the popular microblogging site.

The national pet recovery service says it takes a proactive approach to locating and returning lost pets.

Pet owners can choose between two enrollment options at Helpmefindmypet.com. Upon enrollment, a pet's information is documented, including the pet's photo, description, emergency contact information and microchip number, if applicable.

The service works in conjunction with all microchip companies.

When a registered pet is lost or stolen, the service immediately sends a bulletin to members, shelter groups, veterinary clinics, groomers, pet supply retailers and grooming salons in a 50-mile radius of the pet's last known location.