

The CatChannel Newswire

Top stories: Saber-toothed cats practiced equality; small grief and dealing with the Rainbow Bridge.

Posted: November 12, 2009, 3 a.m. EST

Saber-Toothed Cats Practiced Equality

Despite their long fangs, male saber-toothed tigers may have been less aggressive than other big cats of their time, researchers in California said, reports UPI.com.

Read the article>>

Small Grief and Dealing With the Rainbow Bridge

Normal to feel angry. Normal to feel guilty. Normal to feel sad. Normal to hallucinate. That's what I learned recently when my cat Velma died, reports the Huffington Post.

Read the article >>

Cats Are Trainable — And That's Not a Punchline

Training cats isn't just for professionals — human or feline. The Michigan Humane Society has a Pawsitive Start program that uses volunteers to train cats in their shelter in useful and fun behaviors like the high-five and walking into a carrier, reports MSNBC.com.

Read the article>>