

The CatChannel Newswire

Top stories: Pet owners say they feel the presence of deceased furry friends; Randy: the saga of a long-lost cat.

Posted: January 14, 2010, 3 a.m. EST

Pet Owners Say They Feel Presence of Deceased Furry Friends

Many pet owners report seeing, hearing, smelling or feeling the presence of their beloved pet after its death. It can be an apparition of Fluffy lying on her favorite rug or the faint clickity-clack of Sparky's paws traipsing down the hall, reports the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette.

Read the article>>

Randy: The Saga of a Long-Lost Cat

Patricia Woodward crawled into bed Friday afternoon feeling sick. That's when the phone call came from the Northeast Animal Shelter in Salem. Their beloved family pet had been found, thanks to a microchip, reports The Salem (Mass.) News.

Read the article>>

Discarded Kittens Now Have a Chance to Live

Three kittens may have the chance to live now, thanks to the kindness of a passing stranger in the park, reports the Herkimer (N.Y.) Evening Telegram.

Read the article>>