

American Humane Association to Hold Conference

The 2007 American Humane Annual Conference will be held in Alexandria, Va., Sept. 27-29.

Posted: July 17, 2007, 5 a.m. EDT

Animal welfare, animal protection and humane education professionals are invited to attend the American Humane 2007 Annual Conference in Alexandria, Va., Sept. 27-29. In celebration of AHA's 130th anniversary, the theme of the conference will be the enduring mission of promoting humanity while protecting children and animals.

Conference highlights will include a national leadership forum on a futuristic view of animal sheltering, an exhibit hall featuring a variety of animal products and services, and AHA's 130th Birthday Bash. Each day will feature workshops on a variety of topics in the following categories: Shelter Operations, Management, Humane Education, Field Services, The Link, and Cats and Dogs.

The conference will be held at the Hilton Alexandria Mark Center. For more information about the conference or to register, click here.