

Molly Leaves Meow Mix House

The little gray cat from Houston is the latest competitor voted out of the New York house.

She was sweet-tempered, loving and followed every house rule. Despite her gentle nature, Molly was sent home by the Meow Mix panel of experts, which takes her out of the running for the Meow Mix House grand prize: becoming the feline vice president of research and development for Meow Mix.

Though she won't win the top prize, Molly wins something even better: a permanent home in her native Houston with Evelyn Arringtons family. Molly also leaves the house with a one-year supply of Meow Mix.

Molly represented the Houston Humane Society in the Meow Mix House, the first feline reality show in which 10 cats live together in a specially designed house on Madison Avenue in New York City. The cats compete in several feline competitions, such as the Feline Makeover, the Purr-Off and the Climbing Competition. A panel of feline experts judges the cats on their performances, eliminating the cat-testants one by one.

Fans of Molly can help her win the Viewers Choice award. Visit the Meow Mix House website at <http://www.meowmixhouse.com/index.asp>. The winner of the Viewers Choice award will win a fabulous job with Meow Mix. Posted: July 29, 2006, 5 a.m. EST
