The American Veterinary Medical Association, an organization that represents more than 76,000 veterinarians, has opened its AVMA Collections to pet owners.

“[The collections] is designed to spotlight articles from AVMA scientific journals that have the greatest practical application for readers on topics central to the veterinary profession,” said Janis Audin, DVM, editor in chief of the Journal of the American Veterinary Medical Association.

Topics include zoonotic diseases, which are diseases transmittable between animals and humans, such as Lyme disease, E. coli and tuberculosis, among other topics that are in the works.
