A humane society in Mercer County, Pa., is seeking help to find homes for nearly 100 live cats found in a house trailer in Salem Township.

The live cats, along with some dead ones, were discovered April 26. Officials said both of the trailer's human residents recently had been hospitalized for months and were unable to care for the cats.

According to officials, a woman living in the house told humane society workers that the cats reproduced throughout the years, and she didn't have the money to spay or neuter them, only to feed them.

State troopers came to the house after neighbors reported a foul odor.

For information on adopting any of the cats, call the Humane Society of Mercer County at (724) 981-5445 or email the humane society.
